I have no idea where to put this question so here goes: TC, you mentioned some time ago that you did the manufacturing for some Speakerlab speakers. I got a pair of the S-1's for use as HT surrounds about 5 or so years ago when my interest in speaker building was getting going for real. I have used the cabs for experiments in sound but my question is: Do you have drawing and construction details that aren't proprietary for the boxes themselves? The S-1 box seems heavier and more dense (using the knucklerap test) than other enclosures I've encountered. Just the materials and joinery method is what I'm interested in. lon@athenet.net
