I can't listen to "You might find yourself" without a vision of Nick Nolte and that little dog going through a dumpster.Sound? Incredible. Aside from playing with the grand daughter, I spent most of the day dialing in the VTF on the Sonata which banished the well-known Grado sibilance then tackled speaker placement. Couldn't ever get a center image in this room so I went back to basics and set up the Cardas Golden mean, moving them closer together and farther out from the front (George calls it the back) wall. Bingo! Almost as good as outdoors.I can't sit 62" away from them for some reason but as you push your chair farther back, the image remains stable. Aside from a few nits, more attack than decay and little depth to the image, this is by far the best sound I've had from my own system.
