Unfortunately judging performance can only occur after the fact (traffic stop or accident), and then it becomes a pissing contest between a high priced attorney hired by the defendent and the arresting officer. By placing an arbitary limit (.08) on the amount of alchol in the blood stream, we all have to abide by the same standard, just like speed limits. I may be able to drive safely and sanely at 95 while driver B should be limited to 55. Limiting everyone to an enforceable (and sane) standard makes everyone safer.Your thought?
