I love discussions about stuff like this, at least when they are genuinely investigative and not sensationalized. Of course, the very nature of topics like these tends to somehow encourage embellishment and exaggeration, sort of like an overactive imagination thing. But I do love research and real historical references to matters like these: the Dead Sea Scrolls, The Nag Hammadi texts, The Knights Templar, Illuminati and other secret societies, The Holy Grail, and so on. There is a lot of interesting stories surrounding each of them, and sometimes you gotta think, "where there's smoke, there's fire." Other times, you find people getting so far out that you get sick of it and forget about it.
