My brother-in-law has a PHD in physics from Stanford. He was one of the guys working on the super-collider then they squashed that so he went to work for GE. He was laid off last year but he got good severance and stock options so he is looking for work. They have several teaching positions at universities he could take but he wants to do research. He has recieved some grants for some micr-biology stuff he likes but the grants came with a Caveat' he must follow regulations that don't cross-over into stem-cell research issues. I saw the paperwork, pages and pages.All for some religous reason or other. Is this our future? Warriors and prayer but don't do any research!
