

---

Subject: Re: Hurricane Rita

Posted by Manualblock on Thu, 22 Sep 2005 17:50:38 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

How do you mean that? A peak of Hurricanes or some kind of major weather change? You know plenty say this is not a result of global warming and I have to laugh. Global warming is occurring even without greenhouse gases. The state of the atmosphere has been changing since the earth began and will continue to do so. This calm we are experiencing may be only a blip on the geological timeframe. And to think we can exhaust endless amounts of heat and gas without any consequences is silly. It's only been 10k yrs since the last ice age and thats nothing really.

---