Hey hey! Mr. Block... good goin on the new thread. Look, I dont see why 132K is out of reach. I know its more than the norm and its not a far reach for a husband/wife to have a combined income in that range. If the govenrment has all the facts and figure of who files and they also have all the records of what companies pay out. Do you think its safe to say 132k + is a good place to start a conversation over? I sure would not call that number "wealthy". Of course its all been hashed over everywhere else, taxes is largly what folks talk about.So then do you think its fair that a household earning between 125 and 200 to paying with the group 53%? now, back to my turntable... I almost have this crazy unipivot tone arm dialed in.bill
