I didn`t read the whole article; too long - and I heard and see about it before. Everybody to whom I speak lately, and who lives in "Western Europe" told me the same story. The "Old World" we used to know is "falling apart", those changes are very large in Germany, for example.Old population, who actually built those cultures and economies appeared in defansive to the new comers and "new kids" who obviously don`t respect "the rules of the game". Some political "strengths" actually count on "new order", and new population.Some "strangers" do not want to "socialize" themselves, they have their own rules, religions, way of life.
