I would suggest that the press is more compromised even than politics. It has less checks and balances, basically nochecks and balances. Since the media has the means to express itself and make its own spin, it spoon feeds people with "facts" in a self-serving manner. Its job is solely to make itself look reliable and to make profits. The "free press" is incredibly deceptive and devisive and I don't trust anything I see on TV or in newspapers. Not a word.
