just got home. shop has no air conditioning. had to bake some tranneys. sweated by kajoobies off... Too burnt to be very insightful. But... several of these issues do concern me both on an abstract level (intellectually) as well as on a practical level. Eventually, the keyword screwing around will make search engines less useful and hopefully encourage different upstarts who will make the functions more useful and less spam-matic (is that a word?). IMO... my humble opinion.... it would be just plain wrong for me to tag onto say Electra-Print and have my stuff come up when someone wanted to get info on EP. And the other issue that we spoke about on the phone concerns me a lot as well... have just found myself thinking about it a lot over the last two days or so. Next time I talk to my friend I want to bring this up and encourage him to just let go. forgive my brevity... and I still haven't read all of the interesting stuff you've put up on this and other related issues on this forum. mike
