Subject: Re: No Fooling Around
Posted by Manualblock on Fri, 30 Sep 2005 18:45:43 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

He's nineteen. Thinks he's a tough guy so the recruiter picked up on that and challenged him. He signed up before anyone could talk some sense into him. Listen this ain't no joke. If I have to I will post the sites that tell exactly what you need to do to get your kids off that list. Forget about whether he should serve or not; they have a list of all of his personal information as well as his school records. Is there anyone who believes in personal privacy rights at all anymore? And what about the 16 yr olds they are calling? Are they old enough to make an informed descision about this. They get some unhappy kid who needs a little help and viola' he's cannon fodder for Halliburton.This kids dad fought in Vietnam BTW. Wised him up a little. Not like all the armchair soldiers pushing this war.