Why do you take it as a personal attack? Maybe a little blunt; but blunt is good it shows you respect the other guy and choose not to waste his time if you are not serious.It's not a personal attack. Calling someone clueless; thats an example of a personal attack.Since I am unknown and far away a personal attack hiding behind a monicker would be cowardly. Not my style.I like to discuss politics in the context of everyday life; thats all it means.So; where were we?Legislating from the bench, right?
