Waaaah? Paul Harvey tells Wal-Mart stories? That old crank; who rolled him out of the institution and stuck a mike in his face?I don't see it as being about price. First of all you don't save there. The cheap crap fails in a month and you have to buy it again. Nothing worth having is cheapNothing cheap is worth having.Dollar For Dollar you come out ahead with quality stuff everytime. The real truth is everyone is like small children who have to have new things all the time to keep their interest. Since they can't afford good stuff they buy up all the cheap crap and use it for a little while then toss it. A nation of children.Then to support their cheap crappy toys and pressboard furniture some twelve year old in a third world country gets to work their life away for pennies in order to provide a profit for the Wal-Mart predators.Someday I will look in there if only to confirm my worst suspicians.
