Subject: Re: Notice how they have dropped the word "Illegal" from the immigrant issue
Posted by Manualblock on Wed, 12 Apr 2006 17:18:13 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The real problem is this. Too many people feel bad for them. Funny because they don't know the circumstances of their being here. Many could make it fine back in their homeland's. But they couldn't own all the toys and clothes and cars. So they want to come here. They leave their wives and children and families; sometimes for years. How the hell can you do that? Why can't you stay and make your homeland better by working with your communities?How fair is it that they have driven the cost of healthcare above what American citizens can afford?How fair is it that immigrants who desire to live here from countries that do not have a border with America they can walk across sometimes wait dozens of years for a chance to come here.How fair is it that people with qualified skills and good work histories from places like India cannot come here because they don't have any family here; because family ties determine if you can immigrate legally. So the latino's move here then sneak their familie relatives over and then we have to accept them.If you have a car accident with an illegal; do you know he can sue you? Even if he doesn't have a drivers liscence or insurance or was speeding or breaking the law.How fair is it they can break our laws but we would be jailed instantly if we did the same thing in Mexico or Guatamala.But how really sick is it that we have hundreds of thoudands of Latino prisoners we pay huge amounts of money to keep in jail; while the Mexican government refuses to take their criminals back.