If this is a public forum that everyone sees what we write my friend then we are all in trouble. But I think you know that statement was what you call "Tongue in cheek" so to speak. But I see you want to spank me for my words but you don't offer an opinion about what is right or wrong here regarding this issue.To you observing from far away it seems less important. But when our quality of life suffers serious consequences as a result of this situation it becomes a little more real to us. I have a hospital about a mile and a half away. Too bad we can't go there for emergencies because you will wait upwards of three or four hours to be seen. Why? because of all the freeloaders in there at all times. The law is they have to accept any emergency. So now everything becomes an emergency; colds, scrapes, bruises; all emergencies since they can't pay a doctor and have no insurance. One small example.
