Wonder if he did himself in. To see arrogance and posturing on such a massive level you almost had to admire the guy. Aside from the fact that he was a skell.Which brings me to my point. This current administration with it's similar perspective on things; that those in power should be granted immunity from the constraints of life the rest of us mortals must live under; the greed that empowers every move they make; the underlying contempt for the people and their needs; the philosophy of exclusion for all except those who subserve themselves to the dictates of the ruling members; will they ever have to pay that kind of price for their extreme unction?Will the same type of justice Lay eventually succumbed to extract a vengeance from them?I hope so. The people deserve their day of justice.
