Subject: Re: Home Theater and BassMaxx - AWESOME!
Posted by Wayne Parham on Tue, 19 May 2009 21:18:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Gotta love that!

I have grown a little more mellow as years go by, but not so long ago I powered my basshorns with big Crown arc welder amps, even in my home. It was great for showing off, but bad for the house structure. No kidding. Crank it up very often and the drywall moves enough to pull out the drywall nails. It literally pulls down the house.

Another thing I noticed was that at high volume levels, a television screen will become blurry, sort of looking like a magnet is near. I realized that what was actually happening was the yoke was vibrated enough that it distorted the screen. It can make really unusual patterns as a result. Microphonics in a big way.