I'm an electrical engineer, and my entitre career has been in computers, so I know what you mean. I got an old tube radio about 20 years ago and fixed it up, just for nostalgia. Since then, I've collected about a dozen of them. I don't really care what they'll sell for - I'm not selling. To me they're a little piece of history. Someone listened to current events unfold for the last 50, 60, or 70 years on my radios, and that's fascinating to me. They're like time machines.
