Subject: Re: Speakerlab Corner Horns
Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 25 Mar 2010 05:43:58 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I sell crossovers, but they are specific to the application, meaning they are intended for use only in the speakers they are designed for. This is really the case for all loudspeakers. You can design a pseudo-generic crossover only for speakers that are very close in driver complement and orientation. Even then, a generic crossover is something of a compromise. To improve on the crossovers you have would require some analysis and measurements.