Subject: Re: Lossless Video Compression
Posted by Adveser on Mon, 02 Aug 2010 03:14:24 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

No. There is no such thing. DVD and BR all use compression for video. They don't redraw every single frame from scratch, they redraw what changes from the last frame, unlike analogue which there is a new picture 24 times a second.

But what I think you are asking is how to encode a DVD or video into it's original quality. I think they use MPEG-1 or 2. Not too sure though.