Why does the name David Peel remind of some dj from Radio Caroline?I'm not knowing the band you mention.Freidman has a career as a well-known mystery writer these days...a long way from recording tunes like "Ride 'Em Jewboy".Far as cognition goes, I doubt that that has much to do withanything. Record companies put things in your ears and that'syour life.If the world seems like a big place as far as music goes, justthink of what I call second tier or more popularly 'alternativemusic.' There's a whole second tier of comparable quality stuffthat never makes it beyond promotional college airplay.if I were to make one of these sampler cd's, the firstthing I would put on it is Blue Plate Special with two ofthe recordings: " A Night Out" and "Message From Paul Drake". A night out begins with a guy with no plans entering a bar and seeing an old girl friend who is performing on a catwalk with"tatoos [that} spelled the names of the men left in the dirt."There's nothing like that in mundane pop music in imagery, styleor lack of political correctness. The song does not have a happy ending either."Message From Paul Drake" is about the detective from Perry Mason and how he is the actual unsung hero of the show.These are not materials I ever broadcast. I heard some college kidsdo it long after I left the studio. Then I went out and bought the stuff where I could find it. It's not the 'me-too' music that showsyour connections with pop culture. But here again it's the fact thatI remember these things that keeps them alive.

Blue Plate Special (deal of the day)
