I would like to change out the speakers in my car, since they are really poor quality. I am attracted to 3-way speakers from what I have read about them and need some help when I am shopping for them. Does the description of the speaker need to specify that it is composed of woofer, tweeter and mid-range or is there other terminology that might be used to specify the same thing? Also, I have read that the greater the frequency response range the better. Is there a "best" range to look for?
