The biggest difference in the Eminence and AE drivers is in the midrange, actually. It's smoother and distortion is lower because of flux stabilization rings. The bass is good either way, although all my speakers are high-efficiency designs which means they don't reach to 20Hz by any means. They have powerful bass, but you can always increase deep bass extension with subs. More importantly, using the multisub concept, you can smooth room modes. There's more information about that in the last few pages of the whitepaper in my earlier post.
