I saw that movie and I thought it was a wonderfull film. The young girl was a particularly good actress. She communicated so well that much of the time you did not even need to read the sub-titles. The boy who did most of the organising was the perfect stock character of a hustler with a heart. I can't say enough about the importance of people trying and making the attempt to see this movie. It explains so many things on so many levels about a world we in America are completely oblivious of.Good choice.
