

---

Subject: Re: 4 pi, oh my!

Posted by Wayne Parham on Tue, 30 Aug 2011 18:10:50 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Order well in advance. We usually ship kits pretty quickly but I've had trouble keeping up this year. Partly it's because of growth (thanks to everyone here) but partly it's because of the parts availability of some items. Replenishments of some things are taking longer than they used to.

I keep stock of all crossover parts, and many drivers. But I go through a lot of 2226 woofers and DE250 compression drivers. So it seems like every other month, I get backlogged on one or both of those drivers for anywhere from a week to a month. The TD12S often takes several months to fill. Everything else is usually either in stock, or if not, less than a week until the replenishments arrive.

We build the crossovers at time of order. Sometimes I'll have a couple on the shelf, but there are one for the DE250. Then there are the coil, cap and resistor options. So in most cases, we have to build the crossover at time of order.

kits are taking two to four weeks.