Hi, I don't listen often, but then it is often XM satellite radio. Usually in the car. I float between Vintage Rock, easy listening (when I get riled up) and Jazz. One thing I occasionally do is listen to music in HD on the Tucson FM stations (about 70 miles). I have a Sony XDR-F1HD tuner. It is really a bargain. Super sensitive (I can get some Phoenix stations in regular FM from just about 150 air miles with my external antenna). There was a write up on these things in Stereophile about a year ago or so. One of the best $80 I ever spent. A little thing about the size of a couple of books. All high tech inside, most likely derived from satellite technology as the case, as small as it is, is mostly empty.
