

---

Subject: Re: Music system for an apartment building

Posted by brian21 on Fri, 07 Oct 2011 06:15:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

audioaudio90 wrote on Sun, 22 May 2011 10:08I hate thin walls in apartments. She can minimize sound bleeding by putting something absorbent on the walls--either acoustic foam, blankets, decorative quilts, or tapestries.

That's an interesting idea, I wonder how many people actually do something like this for their apartment. I can't imagine a lot of acoustic foam would look good to most people. The decorative stuff sounds good, but would it work well enough to make a large difference? I kind of wish I had tried something like this though, back when I lived in an apartment. I quickly gave up playing music loudly, with the exception of listening through headphones.

---