Oh, man, that suuuucks! But I guess it could be worse - glad they liked that one wood post.

Suggestion: DIY some baiting stations. Might even save some of the wood they liked for the bait. You can buy the little cups and install them around the periphery of the house. Put bait in the cups and check every couple of months. When you see them chomping on the bait, you put poison in the cups and let the little bastards eat that. Pretty good idea, and doesn't really cost that much to DIY.
