Hi, I hate to be a nay sayer.. .. but I'll bet they don't enforce it or more likely the advertisers find a way around it. They already have to stay below the peak volume levels as it is required by both the FCC and practical concerns. If you over modulate then it causes all sorts of artifacts in the signal (that part is generally self enforced). Now to get them to keep it below the average level has been a constant battle. I would love it if they would enforce it and make it stick.
