Ah, Turning Point. Now there's the best thing Mayall ever did. Room to Move has to be experienced to be believed. I think every British guitar player of note started with the Blues Breakers at one point. Another great blues album is Paul Butterworth/Mike Bloomfield and East-West. Their rendition of Walkin' Blues has never been equalled IMO. Lightning Hopkins is in a league of his own. He's about the only Delta Blues artist I can listen to for more than one song. It's not that the others are bad, it's just I'm not a slow blues fan most of the time and he has a way of drawing you in. If I want female vocals I go with my favorite and Maddy Prior in the group Steeleye Span. Now there is a voice. For background I like either Gerry Rafferty or Herbie Mann. His Memphis Underground is a classic album.
