FloydV, you likely have two types of sound transmission occurring; airborne (sound finding its way through the partitions), and structureborne (sound energy causing the structure to vibrate). You'll need to apply a systems approach that incorporates breaks, blocks, absorption and/or isolation along the transmission path(s). When you find your new home, the scenario can be investigated to discover what solutions will meet your goals. This can likely be done via modeling and without on-site testing.
