Mark-Almond has always been a favorite album of mine. The longer ethnic sax solos have a nicely hypnotic tone i find soothing. It's one of those albums that seem to get lost in the sauce except by a few hard-core devotees or guys who find it by accident. Nice choice. So what next? Today I played the second Bloodrock album; the one with D.O.A. on it. Remember that one? And rocking guitar and drum albums; but of course; the Cactus album with Tim Bogart from Humble Pie and the best rock drummer outside of Bonham ever; Carmine Appice. You might remember him from the Beck, Bogart and Appice album. He had the fastest feet in drum history and many fine drummers still study his licks. Try "Let Me Swim In Your Ocean". Now thats a hard-core shuffle-beat if there ever was one.
