One of the few things that has interested me about the presidential primary is how Ron Paul has done a little better this time. It seems like there is a significant percentage of our population who agree with his positions.

The thing I don't understand is that many of these people will eventually go with Obama or the Republican nominee. The Bush and Obama presidencies have both been fiscally terrible. I've looked at the records of Mitt Romney and Rick Santorum, and I wouldn't trust them to reduce the debt either. How much longer are we going to resort to voting for the lesser of two evils?
