Wow, what a lucky warranty deal. Yeah, cats do like to make speaker grilles into their own personal scratch posts. I love cats and all, but a cat that uses my speaker grille as a scratch post gets used for target practice. They find that out real quick, usually by a much less violent method like a squirt bottle.

So I gotta ask. What does your moniker mean?

You're pretty nice to use a squirt bottle. My dad used to throw whatever was around at an unruly cat. I can recall the television remote being one of the more common items used.

Just like Gofar99, we have three cats at the moment. Two of them aren't too bad, but one gets into everything. So far I haven't had any really crazy problems, she just chews up a wire once in a while. We do our best to keep them away from everything, so far we've been pretty lucky.
