Subject: Re: Taking electronics abroad
Posted by Bill Wassilak on Wed, 04 Apr 2012 23:34:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I agree with Wayne, being a world traveler, different countries have different voltages. Usually 220V in Europe, Africa, Asia etc. 100v in Japan but it's the frequency you have to watch out for. Your electronics may be able to handle 120/220v but it must also be able to handle a 50hz line frequency. This is what usually fries most electronics.