

---

Subject: Re: Old LPS

Posted by lon on Sun, 22 Oct 2006 18:55:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

The best source is the print catalogs which are updated pretty often, though I don't know the names of them. With all the info in the net, I don't know of a good source though you could start with Goldmine magazine's site. The ideal would be to be able to go to a form, type in your stuff and get a price. I don't know of any such source, though there are lists that have been scanned. That's way too tedious for me to do on screen and so a print catalogue is preferred. Also, what to make of the various rating systems of LP quality? I am not a collector and I don't understand much of the rating process.

Goldmine

---