I think that's a wonderful idea in principle, but maybe a little bit annoying for the attendees. The measurement signal is not particularly pleasant to hear. I think most people will probably want to hear music instead of MLS bursts.

Still, I think it's a great idea, especially maybe after hours for those that are interested. Seems like Friday afternoons are perfect for this too, while everyone is getting dialed in. But Saturday afternoon would be kind of rough.

Here's mine: (scroll down to the "Vertical Nulls" link to see a video of the S&L system in action.)
