Yes, I've used three different displays. One is a numeric display - that's the one Bruce did, as you've said. Another is a bar graph, just a line of 10 LEDs. That's what I'm using in my prototypes. Then there's a third, a single LED to show volume setting by the intensity of the light. It's super easy - just take an unused RDAC output and put power and ground across it. Then single-LED approach quite a bit, especially for the six-channel version. One indicator light per channel.
