Like Skype? It's tough to have a two way conversation using speakers of any kind without having feedback problems. If Skype is really your main objective, then headphones are your best bet.

Regarding small speakers for general audio use... like listening to music or videos...

Yes, certain small computer speakers can give great audio. Others, not so much. Many sets come with a subwoofer as well, which can help you get a full sound. My advice is to find a few you like, listen to them in the store and read some reviews.
