Hi Everyone, I have been converting my garage into a workshop. This is because I have run out of space in my present one. Well if you recall a while ago I had some reptilian assistants. It seems they all didn't go away. There is a very tame and rather large lizard in the new shop. It may well be one of the earlier ones that has grown up. About 1.25 diameter and 8-9 inches long. I actually had to prod it to move out of the way earlier today. It just watches what I do - even hammering within about a foot of it. Like I said real tame.
