I bought a used car and it came with an after market stereo system pre-installed. Unfortunately, I don't have to owner's manual for the stereo and I'm having a problem with it. It's almost as if the stereo is in demo mode, like it's still in the store, because it flashes all of its different features across the display and alternates between the different colors you can choose for the font. It's aggravating, especially at night, and I'd really like to set it so that it doesn't flash the colors and features across the display anymore. Has anyone else had a similar problem with their car stereo?
