The subs are quite different. The Morel is twice the subwoofer the Boston Acoustics is. If I ran a R channel to the Morel and then a L channel to the Boston then the L channel would be losing some bass.

This is why I currently run a R/L output to one sub and a R/L output to another.

Things are sounding pretty good. I was just thinking with a PASS B1 Buffer the super low output impedance push would be a good thing to help push signal to all the amps.

I'm a bit new to this.
