I'll send plans out right away.

As for the TD12S, I think what you're saying is the voice coil former was cut slightly on a diagonal.

I suppose it doesn't matter, since there is no dust cap to interfere with. For that matter, some dust caps are glued to the former but others are glued to the cone, and don't touch the former.

There are probably a lot of 'em out there covering voice coil formers that were cut just like yours.

All that said, I would probably give John Janowitz a call. The AE woofers are very attractive, and most people proudly run 'em without grille's because of that. So can understand that you don't want 'em looking funny. You might give John a call and see what can be done.
