I'm trying to select a picture to go on the backsides of the equipment I'll be taking to the LSAF. This is for the benefit of all the backsiders who will be visiting my room.

"Backsiders" are those audio show visitors who are most interested in the backsides of the equipment. They give themselves away when they walk into an exhibit room and immediately walk behind the equipment, stepping on megabuck cables, and stand there for at least five minutes studying the backside of the speakers and electronic components. They often leave without ever having listened to the music.

For the Backsiders benefit I'm pasting pictures like this to the backside of each speaker and equipment stand. I would appreciate it if a few backsiders would let me know whether this one is ok, or would you prefer an full on nude backside view?
