So I finished my 4pi's last week. I have about 3hrs of burn in time so far, and I am enjoying them despite how 'young' they are! Will post an update after more time with them and after I get placement sorted. These are smooth...voices just float!

About the zobel 8ohm 100w resistor - I had ordered the inexpensive 'dummy load' resistors from parts express, however I have seen folks using other heatsinked resistors here on the site. How important is the quality here before I fully button things down? My crossovers are otherwise built with decent components: Mills resistors, alpha-core 16ga ribbon inductors, Sonicap 6.8 and Solens for the large caps, and drivers are the JBL 2226 and B&C 250.

More pics later and listening impressions as they mature.

Thanks Wayne!

PS. If you have another set of silver pi decals, I think a set would look great on these cabinets.
