I don't mind it if everyone behaves sensibly and allows employees to stay home. I am a little concerned because my husband has to work tomorrow and by the time he gets off it will be dark and the roads will likely be very icy.

We have an agreement though that if I call and say it's time to go he will start trying to get home. His employers are great and they can walk home so I think that they will be okay with it. I have packed the car with food, water, flashlights, car charger, and extra clothing just in case. No one near Atlanta wants a repeat of last week.
