I think Redbox is a really nifty idea and with all the Redboxes we have around town -- at the grocery stores, the dollar stores, various convenience stores, etc. -- it's incredibly convenient. Still, it makes me nervous that you have to use a credit or debit card with it. I remember hearing something in the news a few years back about Redbox continually charging for returned movies day after day after day, long after they had actually been returned.

Do you trust Redbox? How often do you use them?
