Subject: Re: Audio measurement on mobile phones
Posted by Wayne Parham on Tue, 15 Mar 2016 15:40:01 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Phone apps aren't nearly as good as dedicated measurement systems. Think about it: The phone application developer has no way of knowing what quality the microphone or input circuitry is like, so the system cannot be calibrated. Phone measurement apps are gimmicky, at least at this time. One could calibrate the hardware though, so those kinds of apps could potentially become more accurate at some point.