Hi Wayne, do you have any opinion on which way a woofer should face for flanking subs, should they face forward? I've seen others mention firing towards to the sidewalls, or is it just a case of which measures best or do they sound best facing forward because of the frequency range they play up to?

I'm thinking of ordering a matching woofer so in the future so I can run a true flanking sub setup with a stereo pair, at the moment my single woofer is downfiring because of children, so I was wondering wether to make them forward firing for the future or I could have them both down firing. Thanks.
