If it isn't muted, have you tried external USB speakers? If USB and HDMI work then you might have a problem with your onboard speakers. If you can, use windows update or something similar to update the sound drivers in case there's a software error.

If all of that fails, then take it to the shop!
I once had a laptop that could only produce sound when it was connected to an external speaker. It took me close to a month to figure out that it was a small issue with the settings.
